Biomedical Electronics Technology Student
Wins Breaking Traditions Award

Jefferson College student Heidi Gaines was recently recognized as a regional winner of the 2014 Missouri Breaking Traditions Award for her success in the college’s new Biomedical Electronics Technology program. In addition to the recognition, she received a $100 scholarship from the Foundation for Missouri Women and a plaque.

Gaines was nominated on the basis of her academic achievement by Biomedical Electronics Instructor Dr. Melissa Coolich.

The Breaking Traditions awards recognize students in nontraditional career/technical education occupations in which individuals from one gender comprise less than 25 percent of those employed in that field. For 19 years, Breaking Traditions has honored outstanding students who have chosen technical programs based on their interests and abilities, and who have not let their gender influence career decisions.

Jefferson College also had three Honorable Mention student/instructor recipients including Veronica Ploesser (Automation and Electrical Control Systems) of House Springs, nominated by Instructor John McDaniel; Heather Erson (Welding Technology) of Arnold, nominated by Assistant Professor Joe Candella; and Computer Information Systems Instructor Kerry Bruce, nominated by student Mark Milchak.

Missouri Career Centers, public two year colleges and comprehensive high schools can nominate a single student from each nontraditional program. Winners from the eight regions in the state are chosen by a panel of judges, and finalists then compete for male and female secondary and postsecondary state awards.

The Breaking Traditions Awards are sponsored by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE), the Missouri Center for Career Education (MCCE), and the MCCE Career Education Coordinators.

The college’s Biomedical Electronics Technician program provides students with an intensive, hands-on experience that concentrates on general biomedical equipment with an introduction to diagnostic imaging. Representatives from the Jefferson College Area Technical School Building Repair class and the Hillsboro High School Life Skills at Jefferson College class recently made a $360 contribution to Kade’s Playground, a proposed play area accessible to all children that will be built at Herculaneum City Park in memory of Kade Bauman.

Funds for the donation were collected through the sale of colorful bird houses that were built by students in the college’s ATS Building Repair Technology class and painted by students in the Life Skills class.

The Life Skills program provides a wide variety of experiences for students with special needs, featuring a curriculum approach that blends academic, daily living, personal/social, and occupational skills into integrated lessons designed to help students learn to function independently in society. Participating students learn three major skill areas: daily living, personal/social, and occupational skills. The ultimate goals of the Life Skills program include preparation for the world of work, development of life skills, and becoming independent, responsible, and productive citizens.
